Euregio Young Researcher Award 2024

Hosted by: Euregio

Six finalists from different scientific disciplines will present their high-level research work on the topic of artificial intelligence (AI). Those who have impressed the jury, consisting of researchers from the Euregio and jury president Ulrike Tappeiner, with their work and presentation will be honoured at the award ceremony in the evening.

Information about the finalists and their research projects can be found on the Euregio website (click here: Euregio-JungforscherInnenpreis | Europaregion Euregio - Tirol - Südtirol - Trentino).

17 August 2024 08:30 - 13:00 | Stage | CCA Schrödinger-Saal

Euregio Innovation Award 2024

Hosted by: EUREGIO

During the Euregio Days, enterprises from the Euregio region Tyrol/South Tyrol/Trentino; will present their innovative products, processes and services concerning the field of artificial intelligence. The best projects are selected by a top-level jury led by Josef Margreiter and will be awarded at the evening event.

Information about the finalists and their research projects can be found on the Euregio website (click here: Euregio-Innovationspreis | Europaregion Euregio - Tirol - Südtirol - Trentino).

17 August 2024 14:00 - 16:30 | Lab | CCA Liechtenstein-Hayek-Saal

Women in AI

Hosted by: Euregio

Dive into the fascinating world of AI! In a series of interactive workshops, we will explore the opportunities and challenges that AI holds for our society together with the experts from "Women in AI Austria!"

The AI-Lab offers twelve slots with different focal points. Registrations until 11 August are accepted here: click here <https://forms.office.com/e/hy5pMcXKqw?origin=IprLink>

Geopolitical Shifts and the Global South: Navigating a New Risk-Reward Paradigm

Track: SEM, Security

The seminar will delve into current global crises, from wars to geopolitical struggles, and examine the pivotal role of the Global South with a special focus on Africa. It will further look at Europe's role, in this new geopolitical setting. The participants unpack strategies to navigate the shifting geopolitical terrain for a balanced future.

Gopaldas, Ronak; Director; Signal Risk; Seminar Chair

Tchakarova, Velina; Founder; FACE For A Conscious Experience; Seminar Chair

19 August 2024 09:00 - 12:30 | Seminar | CCA Hayek-Saal

European Security and the Struggle for Technological Sovereignty

Track: SEM, Security

Progress in emerging and disruptive technologies (EDTs) is enabling a transformation of security and the democratisation of technological tools of war for which Europeans are unprepared. The seminar investigates how Europeans can consolidate defence innovation in EDTs, reduce critical dependencies, and re-shore critical supply chains in a multipolar world. A tabletop exercise allows participants to explore how current gaps in technological sovereignty practically affect European security and defence.

19 August 2024 09:00 - 12:30 | Seminar | Volksschule Obergeschoß 1

The Past, Present and Future of Economic Development and Global Inequalities

Track: SEM, Finance

The empirical evidence about global economic development trends are assessed with novel data sources. Furthermore, participants will be exposed to research frontier methods aimed at addressing the driving factors of global economic development and inequalities as well as future prospects and the challenges posed by climate change, automation, and geopolitical tensions.

Andrijevic, Marina; Research Scholar; International Institute for Applied Systems Analysis; Seminar Chair

Crespo-Cuaresma, Jesus; Professor of Economics; Vienna University of Economics and Business; Seminar Chair

19 August 2024 09:00 - 12:30 | Seminar | Volksschule Obergeschoß 2

The Indo-Pacific: Free, Open, Prosperous, Secure, and Resilient – for Whom?

Track: SEM, Security

The Indo-Pacific region stands for global trade routes, technological leadership, economic vibrancy, but also territorial disputes and regional turmoil – all with potential impact on Europe. The same is true for China's heightening competition with the US, or India's vying for leadership in the Global South. Meanwhile, Japan and South Korea are turning into active foreign policy and security players. Join the debate on how Europe can have a seat at the table and avoid ending up on the menu.

Kim, Duyeon; Adjunct Senior Fellow; Center for a New American Security; Seminar Chair

Reiterer, Michael; Distinguished Professor, EU-Ambassador ret.; Brussels School of Governance; Seminar Chair

19 August 2024 09:00 - 12:30 | Seminar | Mittelschule EG Klasse 1

Accelerating Green and Digital Innovation to Achieve Net-Zero

Track: SEM, Climate

The seminar will critically assess trends in green innovation, a key ingredient in all decarbonisation pathways. A specific focus will be on digitalisation, a transformative and pervasive process creating both opportunities and risks for emission reductions across all sectors and domains. Through a case study approach, participants will develop an in-depth understanding of the drivers and barriers which characterise low-carbon innovation processes and systems and explore pathways through which digitalisation impacts decarbonisation.

Verdolini, Elena; Climate economist and professor; University of Brescia; Seminar Chair

Wilson, Charlie; Professor of Energy & Climate Change; University of Oxford; Seminar Chair

19 August 2024 09:00 - 12:30 | Seminar | Mittelschule EG Klasse 3

On Financial Misbehaviours: Uncovering Underminers of Democracy

Track: SEM, Finance

Financial misbehaviours erode core democratic values: tax evasion, sanction evasion, money laundering are some examples. Looking at prevalent techniques (i. e. use of shell companies) and technologies (i. e. crypto assets) enabling these illicit activities, participants gain a comprehensive understanding of modern financial misbehaviours and develop effective countermeasures to mitigate adverse effects on democracy.

Reinventing Democracy in Europe and Beyond for Future Generations

Track: SEM, Democracy

Young people are disillusioned with democracy and participate less and less in elections. Yet they remain engaged in civic life and join demonstrations among others. How can we rejuvenate democracy by designing and embracing political innovations capable of bringing young people into the fold? Participants will gain a first-hand experience of emerging participatory mechanisms and have the chance to design new ones.

Innovation as an Alternative to Degrowth

Track: SEM, Finance

We live in a world of conflicting policy choices as a response to the global polycrises: degrowth or innovation. In this seminar, we will dive into the detail of the nature of the crises shaping our world, the levers that policy makers have, to shape the scale of these crises, and the multiple dimensions of the solutions to overcome them through innovation. From Silicon Savannah to Silicon Valley, this seminar will analyse the innovation tools and frameworks that policymakers have at their disposal to successfully transition to a post-globalisation world.

19 August 2024 09:00 - 12:30 | Seminar | Volksschule Erdgeschoß 1

Climate Action and Democracy

Track: SEM, Climate

Explore the multifaceted relationship between climate action and democracy across Europe. We cover the current state of climate action, complexities introduced by rising populism, and the role of social media – among others. A key focus is on the potential of participatory design as a tool to enhance democratic engagement in climate action, proposing methods to directly involve citizens in policy-making processes.

19 August 2024 09:00 - 12:30 | Seminar | CCA Herz-Kremenak-Saal

The Unfolding Space Revolution: Space for Prosperity, Peace and Future Generations

Track: SEM, Security

Civil and military space assets and services critically contribute to solutions in climate change, national security, mobility, energy, or connectivity. Those contributions will rapidly become even more pervasive, and the European space sector must support the continent in increasing its status as a strong and strategically autonomous partner to the world. Participants explore the role of space in all four of EFA24's thematic tracks: Security, democracy, climate, finance and economy.

Bekasova, Angelina; Seminar Chair

19 August 2024 09:00 - 12:30 | Seminar | CCA Heiss-Saal

Engaging AI for Democracy and Social Good

Track: SEM, Democracy

Participants explore the impact of Artificial Intelligence (AI) on societies and geopolitics, its role in the design of non-discriminatory processes, and the promotion of inclusive democracy. Through participatory and speculative design approaches, these interactive sessions will seek alternative visions for effectively using AI for social good. Furthermore, the necessary capabilities, skills, and strategies to achieve this vision will be discussed.

Accelerating Climate Action through Science and Partnerships

Track: SEM, Climate

Discuss climate change with a focus on current trends and future outlooks, the role of the energy transition, and its opportunities for international partnerships. We will highlight recent Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change (IPCC) reports, debunk climate science myths, and outline key mitigation strategies. Participants will further explore challenges of supply chain resilience and be introduced to climate change impacts on the Global South.

Anything Goes? Truth and Progress in Science and Society

Track: SEM, Democracy

Discuss provocative ideas and challenge conventional views on truth and scientific change in a free society. Are the ideas of truth and reason able to navigate us through the sea of alternatives and contradicting information? Is there one truth or many? Is there a crisis of knowledge? How real is reality? Can relativism explain different cultures and societies? What determines the quest for knowledge in science: "Trial and Error" or "Anything Goes"?

Food for Thought

“Food for Thought” takes the form of an open space following the concept of a “Speaker’s Corner”, where anyone is invited to suggest a topic of their choice and facilitate a discussion on it. Anyone – seminar chairs, distinguished visitors, scholarship holders, villagers, EFA staff and others – can host a presentation. We look forward to lively discussions!

//INFO: Please inform the responsible EFA team member in the morning of the day you’re planning to speak.

19 August 2024 13:30 - 14:30 | Ritual | CCA Herz-Kremenak-Saal

Open Your Mind: Share your EFA story

In this session scholarship holders are invited to co-author a book on the EFA24 annual theme: They will be guided to write their story on the Alpbach Seminars, their personal Moment of Truth and other reflections. For more information, click here.

Negotiation Skills

Track: SEM

Negotiation is a skill you use in every sphere of life. Participants learn to negotiate in both competitive and collaborative situations. Practical exercises help identify one’s own negotiation style and strategies to overcome difficulties like imbalance of power and mental biases. Learn to manage any negotiation challenges across different spheres of personal and professional life.

Creative Writing: What is Your Truth?

Track: ART, SEM

We use creative writing as a means to experiment with language, to develop confidence, investigate verbal expression, and find fluidity with words. Participants will learn how to worry less about the “right way” of saying something but how to write about what matters to them individually. Most importantly they will realise the value of discovery through play and understand how creative language is essential in expressing ideas in a troubled world.

A Place of Safety

Track: ART, SEM

Many actors get introduced to theatre by their parents sending them to theatre workshops to overcome their shyness and gain confidence; and so, it happens that they end up going on stage in front of hundreds of people. They will say that right there, there is their place of safety. So, what is it about working together to create a piece of theatre that produces this feeling? This seminar, led by students from the Royal Academy of dramatic Art in London, will explore this question.

AI Tools as Digital Butlers: Responsible Use and Practical Applications

Track: SEM

The seminar offers an in-depth insight into the use of Artificial Intelligence (AI) tools such as ChatGPT, Gemini or iask.ai. It illustrates how these tools can act as digital assistants. Experimental exercises demonstrate how AI can be used practically, while discussions and reflections deepen the understanding of the limitations and potentials. The participants will discover ways to use AI technologies consciously and effectively during their studies and in daily life.

Unravelling Reality: Journalistic Methods for Truth Seeking

Track: SEM

In this seminar participants delve into the journalistic mindset and techniques to explore the complexity of truth and of our relationship with reality. Participants will be introduced to the basics of journalism through practical exercises and embark on a journey to uncover the multifaceted nature of truth through mastering interview techniques, posing challenging questions, practising empathetic listening, and understanding diverse perspectives.

Creating an Ensemble

Track: ART, SEM

Students from the Royal Academy of Dramatic Art in London will share the parts of their actor training that deal with ensembles. Creating an effective and dynamic piece of theatre requires every individual actor to function as part of the company. Whether they have a large or a small part does not matter – each actor is equally important. This seminar explores the routes, strategies and compromises we might employ to help us work together effectively.

Woodland Dialogues: Exploring Collaboration through Movement and Sound

Track: ART, SEM

Woodland Dialogues is an immersive project in the Alpbach forest exploring the collaborative creation of dance and music. Participants will draw inspiration from nature to craft soundscapes and choreography, reflecting unity and individuality. The seminar culminates in a performance showcasing the collaborative art formed throughout the week.

Line of Departure - Leadership & Decision

Track: SEM

In military terms, the line of departure is where the attack begins and when quick, yet considered decisions and flexible, yet firm leadership are crucial. The seminar confronts the participants with challenging situations that require efficient decision-making within a group and solutions that are immediately put into action. Participants will not only gain practical and theoretical leadership knowledge but also discover new sides to their personality and skills. //INFO: If the weather allows it, the seminar will take place outdoors. Please bring sportswear and steady footwear.

Staying Sane in a Smart World: Positive Psychology & Resilience

Track: SEM

Digitalisation of work offers many opportunities, but also downsides like a blurred line between work and leisure. This seminar starts from the neurobiology of (social) media use and expands to the known and unknown of the impact on mental health. Asking how one can use its potentials rather than succumb to the threats, it provides tools for selfcare and aims to develop a personalised model for dealing with the impact of media use.

Across Divides - Depolarisation of Communication

Track: SEM, Democracy

Polarisation is one of the most pressing issues of our time. It undermines our ability to collaborate in addressing various contemporary challenges. Different approaches to manage difficult conversations on polarising topics are being explored interactively. Based on practical tools and exercises, the seminar will equip participants with the skills to promote healthy conflict resolution.

The Indo-Pacific: Free, Open, Prosperous, Secure, and Resilient – for Whom?

Track: SEM, Security

The Indo-Pacific region stands for global trade routes, technological leadership, economic vibrancy, but also territorial disputes and regional turmoil – all with potential impact on Europe. The same is true for China's heightening competition with the US, or India's vying for leadership in the Global South. Meanwhile, Japan and South Korea are turning into active foreign policy and security players. Join the debate on how Europe can have a seat at the table and avoid ending up on the menu.

Climate Action and Democracy

Track: SEM, Climate

Explore the multifaceted relationship between climate action and democracy across Europe. We cover the current state of climate action, complexities introduced by rising populism, and the role of social media – among others. A key focus is on the potential of participatory design as a tool to enhance democratic engagement in climate action, proposing methods to directly involve citizens in policy-making processes.

A Place of Safety

Track: ART, SEM

Many actors get introduced to theatre by their parents sending them to theatre workshops to overcome their shyness and gain confidence; and so, it happens that they end up going on stage in front of hundreds of people. They will say that right there, there is their place of safety. So, what is it about working together to create a piece of theatre that produces this feeling? This seminar, led by students from the Royal Academy of dramatic Art in London, will explore this question.

Anything Goes? Truth and Progress in Science and Society

Track: SEM, Democracy

Discuss provocative ideas and challenge conventional views on truth and scientific change in a free society. Are the ideas of truth and reason able to navigate us through the sea of alternatives and contradicting information? Is there one truth or many? Is there a crisis of knowledge? How real is reality? Can relativism explain different cultures and societies? What determines the quest for knowledge in science: "Trial and Error" or "Anything Goes"?

The Unfolding Space Revolution: Space for Prosperity, Peace and Future Generations

Track: SEM, Security

Civil and military space assets and services critically contribute to solutions in climate change, national security, mobility, energy, or connectivity. Those contributions will rapidly become even more pervasive, and the European space sector must support the continent in increasing its status as a strong and strategically autonomous partner to the world. Participants explore the role of space in all four of EFA24's thematic tracks: Security, democracy, climate, finance and economy.

A Place of Safety

Track: ART, SEM

Many actors get introduced to theatre by their parents sending them to theatre workshops to overcome their shyness and gain confidence; and so, it happens that they end up going on stage in front of hundreds of people. They will say that right there, there is their place of safety. So, what is it about working together to create a piece of theatre that produces this feeling? This seminar, led by students from the Royal Academy of dramatic Art in London, will explore this question.

Creating an Ensemble

Track: ART, SEM

Students from the Royal Academy of Dramatic Art in London will share the parts of their actor training that deal with ensembles. Creating an effective and dynamic piece of theatre requires every individual actor to function as part of the company. Whether they have a large or a small part does not matter – each actor is equally important. This seminar explores the routes, strategies and compromises we might employ to help us work together effectively.

European Security and the Struggle for Technological Sovereignty

Track: SEM, Security

Progress in emerging and disruptive technologies (EDTs) is enabling a transformation of security and the democratisation of technological tools of war for which Europeans are unprepared. The seminar investigates how Europeans can consolidate defence innovation in EDTs, reduce critical dependencies, and re-shore critical supply chains in a multipolar world. A tabletop exercise allows participants to explore how current gaps in technological sovereignty practically affect European security and defence.

We use creative writing as a means to experiment with language, to develop confidence, investigate verbal expression, and find fluidity with words. Participants will learn how to worry less about the “right way” of saying something but how to write about what matters to them individually. Most importantly they will realise the value of discovery through play and understand how creative language is essential in expressing ideas in a troubled world.

AI Tools as Digital Butlers: Responsible Use and Practical Applications

Track: SEM

The seminar offers an in-depth insight into the use of Artificial Intelligence (AI) tools such as ChatGPT, Gemini or iask.ai. It illustrates how these tools can act as digital assistants. Experimental exercises demonstrate how AI can be used practically, while discussions and reflections deepen the understanding of the limitations and potentials. The participants will discover ways to use AI technologies consciously and effectively during their studies and in daily life.

A Place of Safety

Track: ART, SEM

Many actors get introduced to theatre by their parents sending them to theatre workshops to overcome their shyness and gain confidence; and so, it happens that they end up going on stage in front of hundreds of people. They will say that right there, there is their place of safety. So, what is it about working together to create a piece of theatre that produces this feeling? This seminar, led by students from the Royal Academy of dramatic Art in London, will explore this question.

Staying Sane in a Smart World: Positive Psychology & Resilience

Track: SEM

Digitalisation of work offers many opportunities, but also downsides like a blurred line between work and leisure. This seminar starts from the neurobiology of (social) media use and expands to the known and unknown of the impact on mental health. Asking how one can use its potentials rather than succumb to the threats, it provides tools for selfcare and aims to develop a personalised model for dealing with the impact of media use.

Creating an Ensemble

Track: ART, SEM

Students from the Royal Academy of Dramatic Art in London will share the parts of their actor training that deal with ensembles. Creating an effective and dynamic piece of theatre requires every individual actor to function as part of the company. Whether they have a large or a small part does not matter – each actor is equally important. This seminar explores the routes, strategies and compromises we might employ to help us work together effectively.

Winds of Radical Change in European Politics?

Track: Democracy

European politics is witnessing unprecedented shifts, challenging established structures and giving rise to new movements. This two-part debate will initially investigate whether a radical change in the European political landscape has in fact occurred, dissecting election results and the driving forces behind them. We will then discuss the broader implications, whether there will be a radical change in the trajectory of Europe and Europe's role in the world.

The Elephant in the Room: Goodbye, Cognitive Dissonance

Track: ART, Climate

Inner conflicts are part of being human. When personal aspirations and reality diverge as we face major crises, cognitive dissonance comes into play: we know it is time to act, but our inner dragon keeps us lingering in inaction.

This workshop invites you to an experiment: by combining approaches from environmental psychology with movement, dance and improvisation, you will look for ways to train our inner dragon: How can we set impulses that help us overcome inner conflicts and move in a new direction both mentally and physically?

Risky Business: Europe's Economic (In-)Security

Track: Finance, Security

The pandemic and the war in Ukraine have shown Europe's dependencies in critical areas. Since then, there has been a lot of talk about "de-risking": mitigating risks and limiting strategic dependencies. However, it's still not clear what this would mean for Europe. How much de-risking is necessary to safeguard Europe's economic security and when does de-risking itself become a risk to the economy?

Which role does Europe play globally? What does the continent's future potential consist of? Do the EU's values (still) have a role in the age of BigTech and AI? How do we address the megatrends that shape our times: demographics, climate change, inequality, and globalization? This panel offers diverse range of views, but with one common denominator: the belief that Europe's best days are yet to come!

EU Enlargement: A New Chapter or Old Wine in New Bottles?

Track: Democracy, Security

The war in Ukraine has brought a new sense of urgency to the EU enlargement process. The European Council opened accession negotiations with Ukraine and Moldova. Now comes the hard part, as the candidate countries in the Western Balkans know only too well. We will discuss what Ukraine and Moldova can learn from their experiences and what impact the new momentum driven by Ukraine has on the enlargement process in the Western Balkans and in general.

Youth as Catalysts for Change

Track: Democracy

Young people are increasingly powerful agents of change, driving innovative solutions and advocating for progressive policies on a global scale. We aim to illuminate the pivotal role of youth in shaping policies worldwide, exploring their diverse contributions – such as involving first-time voters or training other young change-makers – and charting pathways for meaningful youth engagement in decision-making processes.

Co-Creating a Narrative towards a Sufficiency Economy in the EU

Supported by: Robert Bosch Foundation & Mercator Switzerland Foundation | Track: Climate, Democracy

The just transition keeps making news' handlines, however, today's policies aiming at the environmental transformation of the EU are far from being just. The concept of sufficiency ensures that policies and business models deliver on human needs within planetary boundaries. In this workshop you will co-create just transition narratives for the EU that will inform the soon to be published Sufficiency Gap Report of the World Sufficiency Lab.

Resilience Against a Backlash: Maintaining Momentum for Climate Action

Track: Climate, Democracy

There will either be a just transition or no transition at all – This is a statement that is often heard. Particularly in times of (anticipated) backsliding on climate action, it is crucial that a) the transition is designed by taking everyone's needs and interests into account, and b) polarising voices do not dominate the discourse. In this workshop you will explore arguments and policies that really work in addressing the trilemma of social justice, democratic participation and climate action holistically and that support society in unearthing aspiration from grievances.

Finding a New Balance in Times of Crises: Trade and Climate Relations between Europe and Africa

Track: Climate

The EU has made commitments to support Africa in its climate change adaptation and mitigation efforts. At the same time, the EU's climate diplomacy actions could contribute to a potential slowing down of African economic growth. How can the two continents shape a relationship that advances decarbonisation without creating trade barriers, that is, a relationship that is reciprocal and fit for the challenges of the 21st century?

US vs. EU Green Tech Race: How to Work Together?

Track: Climate, Finance
 The US and the EU are both pushing their green industries, but they are taking different approaches. The recent US Inflation Reduction Act (IRA) sent a clear message that green technology is a profitable industry. This has raised concerns in Europe that companies will choose to invest in the US rather than in Europe. What can Europe learn from the US to unlock private investment in clean technologies and which opportunities for cooperation exist?

(Re-)Creating Affordable Housing in Central and Eastern Europe (CEE)

Supported by: ERSTE Foundation | Track: Finance

While affordable housing models thrive in Austria, they have almost ceased to exist in Central and Eastern Europe (CEE), where the vast majority of the population lives in their own dwelling. Following a recent surge in real estate prices, flats in the region's major cities have become the most expensive in the European Union, posing a real challenge, especially for the younger generation. We'll delve into the strategies to leverage Austria's experience in creating new ways towards affordable housing in CEE.

Shifting Paradigms: Use the Power of Your Personal Climate Handprint

Track: Climate

The escalating climate crisis demands urgent action from as many people as possible. However, when it comes to climate action, many people feel powerless, overwhelmed, and frustrated. Framings that individualise responsibility, along with finger-pointing and blame-games, lead to guilt, repression, and inactivity. We will explore how the term “carbon footprint” has contributed to provoking this situation and how each of us can contribute to positive change effectively by applying the climate handprint concept.

Disunited in Diversity: What Role for the EU in the Middle East?

Track: Security

Unlike in the case of the war in Ukraine, the EU has not been able to speak with one voice regarding the war in Gaza. Member states have been criticised for applying double standards regarding the two conflicts. How does this affect Europe’s credibility in the Middle East and beyond and what role can the EU play in fostering a sustainable peace?

Let Others Wage War For You, Thou, Happy Austria, Stay Neutral?

Track: Security

According to a poll, 72 % of Austrians expect other EU members to defend them in case of a military attack, but only 14 % say that Austria should support other EU members with armed troops. This attitude is also reflected in statements from government officials and could lead to Austria's isolation. Time for an honest discussion about the tension between neutrality and solidarity and the consequences for Austrian security policy.

Media Moments of Truth

Supported by: ORF

We are facing the “Moment of Truth”, not only at the European Forum Alpbach 2024, but also in our society as we know it. Current debates on the relationship between data, innovation and AI focus on the ethical, social and economic consequences that technologies impose on societies. How can the media use new tools to find, communicate and protect the “best obtainable version of the truth”? At the same time, these tools offer multiple opportunities for the media to create more efficient and relevant offerings for different audiences. With democracy under pressure, traditional legacy and public service media have a particularly important and responsible role to play. Being a critical media infrastructure, they must ensure that societies can continue to rely on a modicum of trustworthy and transparent information in order to function properly. Join the discussion on how public media can fulfil its role in a digital and AI-driven world.

Truth and Knowledge in Crisis: Anything Goes?

Paul Feyerabend, one of the most influential philosophers of our time, started his career at the European Forum Alpbach. Back in the middle of last century, Alpbach was the intellectual centre of Austria where philosophers and scientists who fled the Nazis came together to discuss the future.

His ideas on science, truth and relativism are more relevant than ever. There is a crisis of truth and knowledge. Have we lost the ability to distinguish between truth and lie, fact and fiction, reality and illusion, and between what is and what is not? Is there such a thing as the objective truth?

Climate Debate: State vs. Market – Finding Common Ground

Hosted by: KONTEXT – Institute for Climate Matters, with the kind support of GRIPS and CEOs for Future | Supported by: UNIQA & Hans(wo)men Group | Track: Climate, Democracy

The climate debate has become increasingly polarised. While global science agrees on the huge challenge ahead, politics doesn't seem to agree on a way forward, thus delaying urgently needed policy decisions. One of the key questions is: Can "the market" fix this? Or do we need strong state intervention to prevent an impending climate catastrophe?

Join this completely new, inspiring, provoking debate and see for yourself, whether the panelists can change the audience's opinion.

Yes, there are different value systems. Yes, there are different opinions and approaches. Let's find common ground on a constructive way forward in climate matters for a climate neutral and economically thriving continent.

European Peace Circle

Peace. The most complex yet simple thing in the world. The beginnings of the Alpbach Forum revolved around the dream of preserving peace in Europe, a topic that must never lose its importance. Pausing, becoming aware of inner and outer peace. Shedding roles. Cultivating peace. The European Peace Circles are a ritual that connects the past with the future.

Europe vs the Polycrisis

Track: Climate, Finance, Democracy, Security

Europe faces wars on its border and demagogues in its midst, all while the world is suffering political and social division and the impact of an out-of-control climate. What is the nature of the twenty-first century crises, what are the strengths and weaknesses of Europe and how can we turn these threats into opportunities?

//INFO: The session will begin with the short film High Hopes (Amir Mrzae, FR 2023, 2:45 min), offering an artistic perspective on the topic of discussion.

Quantum Computing: The Next Superpower?

Track: Finance

Quantum computing promises to disrupt industries and unleash breakthroughs at an unprecedented speed. It is believed to tackle problems beyond imagination – from secure communications to new levels of computing that could bring us life-saving drugs in record time, improved AI performance, and optimised financial markets. But with great power comes great responsibility. Will quantum computing be the key to solving humanity's greatest challenges, and what could be the unforeseen consequences?
